

Fig. S1: Comparison of the average sea surface salinity values in the NW Iberia during the anchovy spawning (April-July) between 1999-2009 (top) and 2010-2020 (middle). The difference between the 2010-2020 mean and the 1999-2009 mean is also presented (bottom). Blue (red) pixels indicate decreases (increases) in salinity.

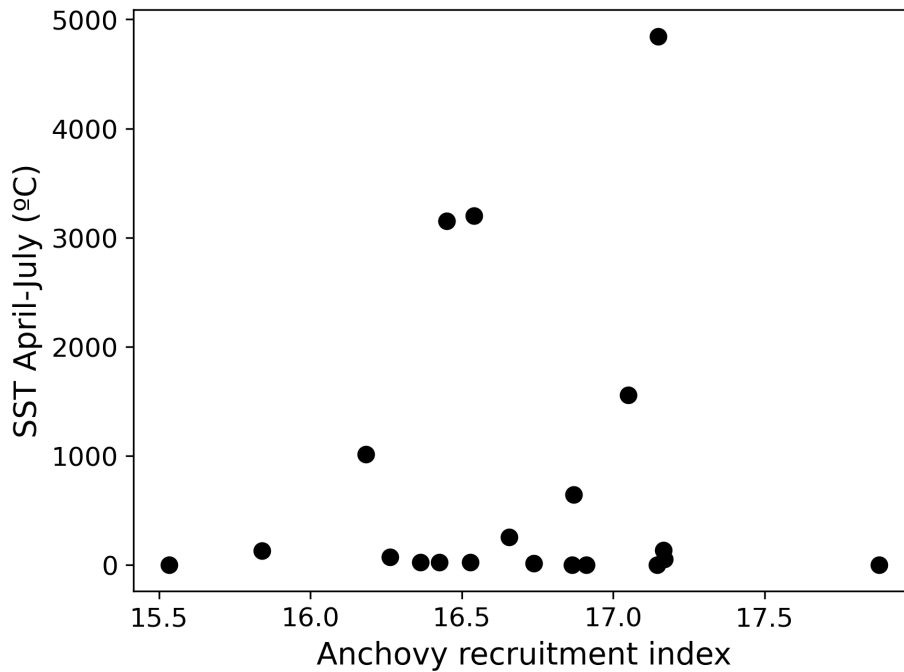

Fig. S2: Relationship between the mean sea surface temperature (SST; °C) during the spawning season (April-July) and the anchovy recruitment index in NW Iberia.

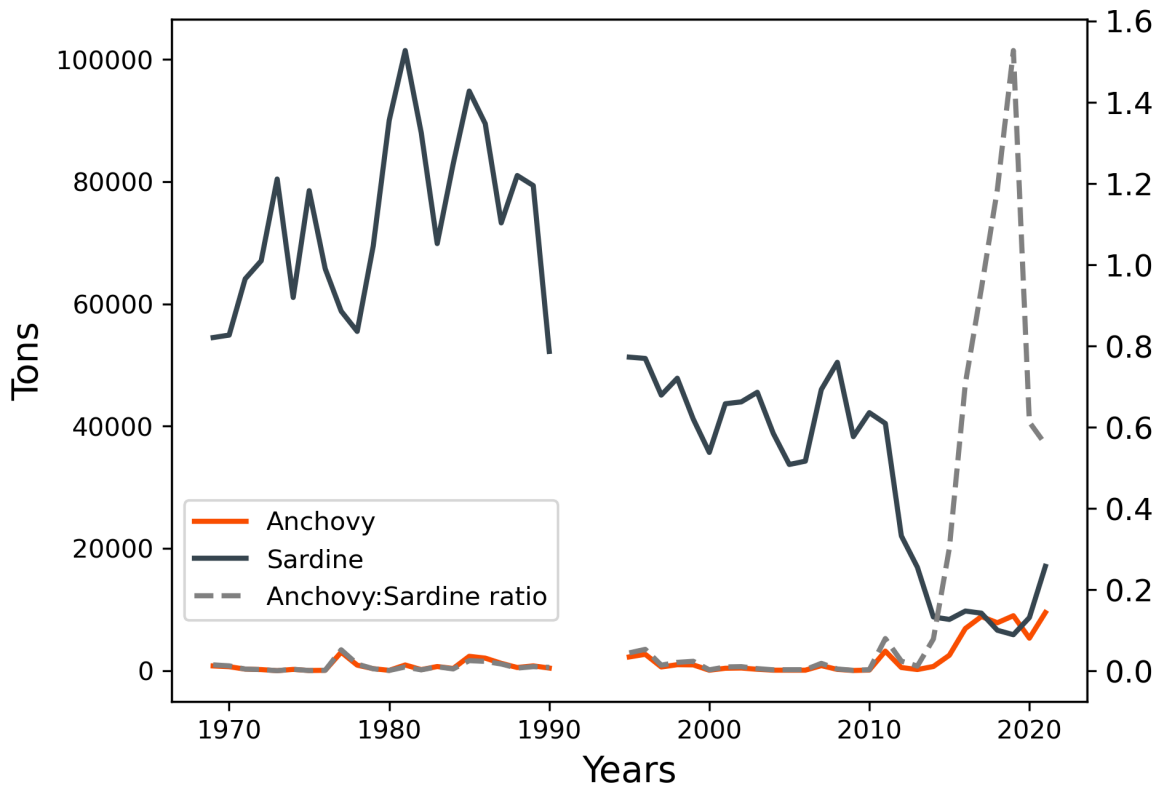

Fig. S4: Total landings of European anchovy (orange line) and European sardine (black line) in the Western coast of Portugal from 1969 to 2021. The anchovy-to-sardine ratio (grey dashed line) is also plotted in the secondary axis.

Fig. S5: Yearly estimates of sardine recruitment strength, spawning stock abundance (SSA) and total landings in western Portugal during the period 1996-2021.

Table S1: Mean, median, minimum, maximum, standard deviation and percentiles 15, 40, 60, and 85 for each of the environmental variables used in optimal windows analysis: net primary production (NPP; $\text{mgC m}^{-3} \text{d}^{-1}$), sea surface temperature (SST; $^{\circ}\text{C}$), sea surface salinity (SSS; unitless), upwelling index (UI; $\text{m}^3 \text{s}^{-1} \text{km}^{-1}$), and total precipitation (mm). Note that the descriptive statistics were calculated using the 8-day weeks means used in the optimal windows analysis.
